

Here you see

Here you see a building

Full of shattered windows

Words spayed on the walls

What holds it is love and respect

But there is no one out there to give it that

Here you see a community

Small but outgoing

Fragile but well-spoken

No food

clothes

Medicine

But a lot of love to share

Here you see a school

Full of love and excitement

But with no resources

No papers

No pen

No nurse

Here you see a nursing home

Full of joy and happiness

Full of love and care

For any size

Everyone there are attached to a circle of friendship

Everyone there are the reason there is still hope

Here you see a church

Full of hope and praise

Working together to become something bigger

To bring back more change

Here you see...Detroit

A place that balances the bad and good

A place of happiness and joy

A place of agony and despair

And all you can see are the buildings

Know what do you see here?

Key Notes:

As You can see my trip to Detroit was very inspirational and has impacted me as an individual in the long run. I am very proud of the service that all of us has done on the trip and the memories that fulfil it. Just being part of this group has channel my understanding to become stronger then I am and to be bless of the things that's been provided for me. To see Detroit's struggle and their changes is completely remarkable. There's been a quote that's been on my mind for a while. It stated that, "at the end of the day it's not about what you have or even what you accomplished... it's about who you lifted up, who you've made better. It's about what your given back. This quote expresses the meaning of being selfless, not being selfish. I will never forget this experience and will use it for the future. This service trip has been an everlasting moment that I will cherish forever.
